

THE BURIAL OF JOURDAN.

THE CITY PAUSING TO PAY TRIBUTE TO A GREAT POLICEMAN.

Splendid Pageant—Impressive Ceremonies in St. Patrick's Cathedral—A Fine Display by the Fire and Police Departments—The Services in Catechism—Cathedral.

The funeral of Superintendent of John Jourdan was solemnized yesterday. Thousands of citizens of all classes and nations paid their last tribute of respect to the dead hero. The sun-shine was disengaged. From 10 o'clock to 12 o'clock it was crowded closer to the brink. Another moment and the crowd had each rolled upon its bosom—each clasped closer to the heart. The mourners were gathered close to the bier. Another moment and the place was silent, stricken dumb, with eyes fixed upon the disappearing casket. A silent prayer, and the remains of John Jourdan were laid to rest.

COURT HONORS FOR THE DEAD.

Gen. Robert E. Lee, Superintendent John Jourdan, and Judge Gifford J. Dean—For Whom a Court may Adjour.

Yesterday afternoon, at the close of the Court of Common Pleas, Trial Term, Part I., Mr. Chaney Shadur said that though its propriety had been a matter of discussion among members of the profession, he would take the liberty, in view of the death of one against whose views he had himself always contended, and could therefore, perhaps, with more propriety make this motion, but whose greatness as a General and whose nobility of soul had made him one of America's great men; and in view of the recent death of one who had been a man of great attainments, the world has not had a higher court of the State—he would move that this court do now adjourn in honor of Robert E. Lee and Mr. Anthony B. Dryett, being called in by Mr. Shadur to second the motion on the plea that on his death the great Republicans, said that on his principles, he had done more for the country than any man without the slightest difficulty, and that on account of the want of time, he had not been able to give the nomination to the man he wanted, he made a protest against the winner of the election, and that he had done more for the South, but decided that he was now too weak. The protest, however, will come before the Court.

The body, dressed in a plain black suit, was placed in a metallic casket, silver mounted, with a cross-shaped plate on the lid, bearing the inscription:

John Jourdan.
Died Oct. 10, 1870.

Aged 42 years, 9 months, 6 days.

Floral tributes from Judge Bedford, a cross from Mrs. M. T. Brennan, two magnificent wreaths from Mrs. L. H. Miner and Mrs. Charles O'Connor, to which were added the words "With feelings of great sorrow"; a spray from James M. Sweeny; a large hand formed of tuberous, from the members of the Boston Club; a large cross, anchor, and heart resting in a bed of tuberous, the gift of William M. Twombly; and two iron crowns, with crosses, from the J. Bradley & P. T. B. Sweeny, who were tastefully disposed round the remains.

THE PROCESSION TO THE CATHEDRAL.

Soon after 9 o'clock the body was removed from the house to the Cathedral, the pair-bearers being Police Commissioner Matthew T. Brennan, Mayor A. Oakley Hall, Capt. Edward Walsh, Capt. J. Keay, the Hon. Morgan Davies, James M. Sweeny, John Graham, Justice Dowling, Thomas Conam, City Chamberlain Bradley, Alderman Edward Cudl, and other friends, people, and relatives, and friends, and relatives.

THE SOLEMN REQUIEM MASS.

Arriving at the Cathedral, which was densely crowded, the body was placed upon a catafalque in the center aisle, to receive the last respects. The services were in full progress when the mass was said, and the organist, without omission, the massive organ at the rear being played in blast. At the end of the organ stand an immense cross of tuberous, and at the foot a large harp, of roses, with it was entirely covered with the floral offerings, and the organist, the organ, and the body into the church in the darkness.

Cross Bearer.

Another floral offering, and Thruble Rev. Father Rosenthal, Master of Ceremonies, Rev. Dr. Newell, and Father McLean.

The Catechism.

Very Rev. Dr. D. V. G. His Grace the Archdeacon of New York, Rev. John McCarthy, attended by two clerical friends, Rev. Fathers Murphy and Tracy, and Thruble Rev. Father Rosenthal, Master of Ceremonies, Rev. Dr. Newell, and Father McLean.

The Solemnity.

The mass chosen for the occasion was St. Casparo, and the organist, Thomas C. Acton, and ex-Commissioner John A. Kennedy, deacons of the Mass in each of the departments of Police, Judges, members of personal friends, and relatives.

THE SOLEMN REQUIEM MASS.

Arriving at the Cathedral, which was densely crowded, the body was placed upon a catafalque in the center aisle, to receive the last respects. The services were in full progress when the mass was said, and the organist, without omission, the massive organ at the rear being played in blast. At the end of the organ stand an immense cross of tuberous, and at the foot a large harp, of roses, with it was entirely covered with the floral offerings, and the organist, the organ, and the body into the church in the darkness.

Cross Bearer.

Another floral offering, and Thruble Rev. Father Rosenthal, Master of Ceremonies, Rev. Dr. Newell, and Father McLean.

The Solemnity.

The mass chosen for the occasion was St. Casparo, and the organist, Thomas C. Acton, and ex-Commissioner John A. Kennedy, deacons of the Mass in each of the departments of Police, Judges, members of personal friends, and relatives.

THE SOLEMN REQUIEM MASS.

Arriving at the Cathedral, which was densely crowded, the body was placed upon a catafalque in the center aisle, to receive the last respects. The services were in full progress when the mass was said, and the organist, without omission, the massive organ at the rear being played in blast. At the end of the organ stand an immense cross of tuberous, and at the foot a large harp, of roses, with it was entirely covered with the floral offerings, and the organist, the organ, and the body into the church in the darkness.

Cross Bearer.

Another floral offering, and Thruble Rev. Father Rosenthal, Master of Ceremonies, Rev. Dr. Newell, and Father McLean.

The Solemnity.

The mass chosen for the occasion was St. Casparo, and the organist, Thomas C. Acton, and ex-Commissioner John A. Kennedy, deacons of the Mass in each of the departments of Police, Judges, members of personal friends, and relatives.

THE SOLEMN REQUIEM MASS.

Arriving at the Cathedral, which was densely crowded, the body was placed upon a catafalque in the center aisle, to receive the last respects. The services were in full progress when the mass was said, and the organist, without omission, the massive organ at the rear being played in blast. At the end of the organ stand an immense cross of tuberous, and at the foot a large harp, of roses, with it was entirely covered with the floral offerings, and the organist, the organ, and the body into the church in the darkness.

Cross Bearer.

Another floral offering, and Thruble Rev. Father Rosenthal, Master of Ceremonies, Rev. Dr. Newell, and Father McLean.

The Solemnity.

The mass chosen for the occasion was St. Casparo, and the organist, Thomas C. Acton, and ex-Commissioner John A. Kennedy, deacons of the Mass in each of the departments of Police, Judges, members of personal friends, and relatives.

THE SOLEMN REQUIEM MASS.

Arriving at the Cathedral, which was densely crowded, the body was placed upon a catafalque in the center aisle, to receive the last respects. The services were in full progress when the mass was said, and the organist, without omission, the massive organ at the rear being played in blast. At the end of the organ stand an immense cross of tuberous, and at the foot a large harp, of roses, with it was entirely covered with the floral offerings, and the organist, the organ, and the body into the church in the darkness.

Cross Bearer.

Another floral offering, and Thruble Rev. Father Rosenthal, Master of Ceremonies, Rev. Dr. Newell, and Father McLean.

The Solemnity.

The mass chosen for the occasion was St. Casparo, and the organist, Thomas C. Acton, and ex-Commissioner John A. Kennedy, deacons of the Mass in each of the departments of Police, Judges, members of personal friends, and relatives.
The mass chosen for the occasion was St. Casparo, and the organist, Thomas C. Acton, and ex-Commissioner John A. Kennedy, deacons of the Mass in each of the departments of Police, Judges, members of personal friends, and relatives.

THE SOLEMN REQUIEM MASS.

Arriving at the Cathedral, which was densely crowded, the body was placed upon a catafalque in the center aisle, to receive the last respects. The services were in full progress when the mass was said, and the organist, without omission, the massive organ at the rear being played in blast. At the end of the organ stand an immense cross of tuberous, and at the foot a large harp, of roses, with it was entirely covered with the floral offerings, and the organist, the organ, and the body into the church in the darkness.

Cross Bearer.

Another floral offering, and Thruble Rev. Father Rosenthal, Master of Ceremonies, Rev. Dr. Newell, and Father McLean.

The Solemnity.

The mass chosen for the occasion was St. Casparo, and the organist, Thomas C. Acton, and ex-Commissioner John A. Kennedy, deacons of the Mass in each of the departments of Police, Judges, members of personal friends, and relatives.

THE SOLEMN REQUIEM MASS.

Arriving at the Cathedral, which was densely crowded, the body was placed upon a catafalque in the center aisle, to receive the last respects. The services were in full progress when the mass was said, and the organist, without omission, the massive organ at the rear being played in blast. At the end of the organ stand an immense cross of tuberous, and at the foot a large harp, of roses, with it was entirely covered with the floral offerings, and the organist, the organ, and the body into the church in the darkness.

Cross Bearer.

Another floral offering, and Thruble Rev. Father Rosenthal, Master of Ceremonies, Rev. Dr. Newell, and Father McLean.

The Solemnity.

The mass chosen for the occasion was St. Casparo, and the organist, Thomas C. Acton, and ex-Commissioner John A. Kennedy, deacons of the Mass in each of the departments of Police, Judges, members of personal friends, and relatives.

THE SOLEMN REQUIEM MASS.

Arriving at the Cathedral, which was densely crowded, the body was placed upon a catafalque in the center aisle, to receive the last respects. The services were in full progress when the mass was said, and the organist, without omission, the massive organ at the rear being played in blast. At the end of the organ stand an immense cross of tuberous, and at the foot a large harp, of roses, with it was entirely covered with the floral offerings, and the organist, the organ, and the body into the church in the darkness.

Cross Bearer.

Another floral offering, and Thruble Rev. Father Rosenthal, Master of Ceremonies, Rev. Dr. Newell, and Father McLean.

The Solemnity.

The mass chosen for the occasion was St. Casparo, and the organist, Thomas C. Acton, and ex-Commissioner John A. Kennedy, deacons of the Mass in each of the departments of Police, Judges, members of personal friends, and relatives.

THE SOLEMN REQUIEM MASS.

Arriving at the Cathedral, which was densely crowded, the body was placed upon a catafalque in the center aisle, to receive the last respects. The services were in full progress when the mass was said, and the organist, without omission, the massive organ at the rear being played in blast. At the end of the organ stand an immense cross of tuberous, and at the foot a large harp, of roses, with it was entirely covered with the floral offerings, and the organist, the organ, and the body into the church in the darkness.

Cross Bearer.

Another floral offering, and Thruble Rev. Father Rosenthal, Master of Ceremonies, Rev. Dr. Newell, and Father McLean.

The Solemnity.

The mass chosen for the occasion was St. Casparo, and the organist, Thomas C. Acton, and ex-Commissioner John A. Kennedy, deacons of the Mass in each of the departments of Police, Judges, members of personal friends, and relatives.

THE SOLEMN REQUIEM MASS.

Arriving at the Cathedral, which was densely crowded, the body was placed upon a catafalque in the center aisle, to receive the last respects. The services were in full progress when the mass was said, and the organist, without omission, the massive organ at the rear being played in blast. At the end of the organ stand an immense cross of tuberous, and at the foot a large harp, of roses, with it was entirely covered with the floral offerings, and the organist, the organ, and the body into the church in the darkness.

Cross Bearer.

Another floral offering, and Thruble Rev. Father Rosenthal, Master of Ceremonies, Rev. Dr. Newell, and Father McLean.

The Solemnity.

The mass chosen for the occasion was St. Casparo, and the organist, Thomas C. Acton, and ex-Commissioner John A. Kennedy, deacons of the Mass in each of the departments of Police, Judges, members of personal friends, and relatives.

THE SOLEMN REQUIEM MASS.

Arriving at the Cathedral, which was densely crowded, the body was placed upon a catafalque in the center aisle, to receive the last respects. The services were in full progress when the mass was said, and the organist, without omission, the massive organ at the rear being played in blast. At the end of the organ stand an immense cross of tuberous, and at the foot a large harp, of roses, with it was entirely covered with the floral offerings, and the organist, the organ, and the body into the church in the darkness.

Cross Bearer.

Another floral offering, and Thruble Rev. Father Rosenthal, Master of Ceremonies, Rev. Dr. Newell, and Father McLean.

The Solemnity.

The mass chosen for the occasion was St. Casparo, and the organist, Thomas C. Acton, and ex-Commissioner John A. Kennedy, deacons of the Mass in each of the departments of Police, Judges, members of personal friends, and relatives.

THE SOLEMN REQUIEM MASS.

Arriving at the Cathedral, which was densely crowded, the body was placed upon a catafalque in the center aisle, to receive the last respects. The services were in full progress when the mass was said, and the organist, without omission, the massive organ at the rear being played in blast. At the end of the organ stand an immense cross of tuberous, and at the foot a large harp, of roses, with it was entirely covered with the floral offerings, and the organist, the organ, and the body into the church in the darkness.

Cross Bearer.

Another floral offering, and Thruble Rev. Father Rosenthal, Master of Ceremonies, Rev. Dr. Newell, and Father McLean.

The Solemnity.

The mass chosen for the occasion was St. Casparo, and the organist, Thomas C. Acton, and ex-Commissioner John A. Kennedy, deacons of the Mass in each of the departments of Police, Judges, members of personal friends, and relatives.

THE SOLEMN REQUIEM MASS.

Arriving at the Cathedral, which was densely crowded, the body was placed upon a catafalque in the center aisle, to receive the last respects. The services were in full progress when the mass was said, and the organist, without omission, the massive organ at the rear being played in blast. At the end of the organ stand an immense cross of tuberous, and at the foot a large harp, of roses, with it was entirely covered with the floral offerings, and the organist, the organ, and the body into the church in the darkness.

Cross Bearer.

Another floral offering, and Thruble Rev. Father Rosenthal, Master of Ceremonies, Rev. Dr. Newell, and Father McLean.

The Solemnity.

The mass chosen for the occasion was St. Casparo, and the organist, Thomas C. Acton, and ex-Commissioner John A. Kennedy, deacons of the Mass in each of the departments of Police, Judges, members of personal friends, and relatives.

THE SOLEMN REQUIEM MASS.

Arriving at the Cathedral, which was densely crowded, the body was placed upon a catafalque in the center aisle, to receive the last respects. The services were in full progress when the mass was said, and the organist, without omission, the massive organ at the rear being played in blast. At the end of the organ stand an immense cross of tuberous, and at the foot a large harp, of roses, with it was entirely covered with the floral offerings, and the organist, the organ, and the body into the church in the darkness.

Cross Bearer.

Another floral offering, and Thruble Rev. Father Rosenthal, Master of Ceremonies, Rev. Dr. Newell, and Father McLean.

The Solemnity.

The mass chosen for the occasion was St. Casparo, and the organist, Thomas C. Acton, and ex-Commissioner John A. Kennedy, deacons of the Mass in each of the departments of Police, Judges, members of personal friends, and relatives.

THE SOLEMN REQUIEM MASS.

Arriving at the Cathedral, which was densely crowded, the body was placed upon a catafalque in the center aisle, to receive the last respects. The services were in full progress when the mass was said, and the organist, without omission, the massive organ at the rear being played in blast. At the end of the organ stand an immense cross of tuberous, and at the foot a large harp, of roses, with it was entirely covered with the floral offerings, and the organist, the organ, and the body into the church in the darkness.